

Online Lecture

Thursday, November 26, 2020, 17:00 (CET)

Gendering Associational Culture in Post-Ottoman Bosnia and Herzegovina

Fabio Giomi

A Gajret sewing class in Trebinje, late 1930s/early 1940s

Source: Courtesy of Jasmina Cvjetić

Fabio Giomi is CNRS researcher at the Centre d'études turques, ottomanes, balkaniques et centroasiatiques (CETOBaC, EHESS) in Paris, France. His research focuses on the social and cultural history of Southeastern Europe between the late-nineteenth and mid-twentieth centuries, with a special focus on the Yugoslav region. Among his current research topics are voluntary associations and social movements, women and gender history, Balkan Muslims, transnational studies. He is the author of Making Muslim Women European. Voluntary Associations, Gender and Islam in Post-Ottoman Bosnia and Yugoslavia (CEU Press, under press). He also co-edited the book Kemalism. Transnational Politics in the Post-Ottoman World (I.B. Tauris, 2019) and the journal issues Gendering the (post-)Ottoman world (Clio. Women, Gender, History, Volume 48, Issue 2, 2018) and Voluntary Associations in Yugoslavia, 1918-1941 (European Review of History, Special Issue, 26, 1, 2019). His email address is fabio.giomi@ehess.fr.

We kindly ask you to register here by November 25, 2020.